Crystals and Sacred Geometry

Sacred Geometric Grid Layouts

You can use sacred geometry to create layouts of crystal grids, keeping the meaning of the geometry in mind as you do.

Each of the grids in this document is large enough you can print it and use it as a grid sheet. In some cases, you may wish to blow it up to get more detail in the printing.
A circle is the simplest layout for a crystal grid. Use a circle (or concentric circles of crystals) to represent:

- Totality
- Oneness
- Wholeness
- Perfection
- Eternity
- Timelessness
- Balance
- Grounding
Spirals represent your journey along life’s path and along a spiritual path. Spirals occur in many elements of nature. Use a spiral for your grid to represent:

- Creativity
- Growth
- A spiritual path
- Cosmic forces
- Life’s journey
- Use to expand your influence or understanding
- Spiritual growth and enlightenment
- Expanding consciousness
- The cycle of birth, death, and reincarnation
- Unfolding of spirituality
- Use to connect to nature
Vesica Piscis

Two circles, interlinked and overlapping form a vesica piscis. It represents the joining and overlapping of dualities, such as male and female. Grids in the shape of the vesica piscis represent:

- Joining of opposites
- Duality
- In Christianity, a reference to Christ
- Creation
- Harmony
- Use to re-establish communication
- Joining of the physical world with the spiritual universe
- Sacred marriage
- Creating balance
- Rejoining with someone with whom you are at odds
Three conjoined rings of the Borromean Rings show the uniting two to add a third. Use this shape for grids that support:

- Growth of family
- Bringing together mutually supportive groups
- Gathering a team to help achieve a mutual goal
The center of the Borromean Rings forms the triquerta. You may recognize it as the Celtic knot or trinity knot. In Celtic mythology, it is the symbol of the Moon Goddess and of Odin. It also represents trios or trinities, such as body, mind, spirit. Some uses for this grid shape:

- Stimulating creativity
- To help with artistic pursuits
- Releases creative blocks
- Focus on trinity from Christianity

- Creates balance
- Balances body, mind, spirit
- Protection
- Celebrating the Divine feminine
Seven overlapping circles form the seed of life, and they represent harmony and truth. Uses for a seed of life grid include:

- Balance and harmony
- Truth
- Protection
- Completing a project
- Represents 7 days of Creation
- Creation
13 equal circles and their various connections form Metatron’s cube, which represents Source energy. It contains all of the platonic solids. This is a very powerful shape for:

- Creativity
- Connection to Source
- Connection to Divine
The flower of life is the visualization of the connectedness of all of the universe. It reminds us we are all one, we are made of the same stuff, and we are all connected. Use to:

- Strengthen your connection to all and to the universe
- Strengthen self love
- Recognize self as the embodiment of the Divine
The pentagram is a five pointed star that carries with it the numerology of the number five, which is considered a magical number. It is also a Wiccan symbol when encased in a circle, and the points represent the heavens, earth, air, water, and fire. The pentagram connects you to the earth and the heavens equally, so it is a great shape for:

- Balancing
- Grounding
- Connecting to nature
- Invoking magic
- Connecting to Earth
Star of David

Containing two overlapping triangles, the Star of David is associated with the heart chakra and unconditional love. Use this in grids for:

- Forgiveness
- Kindness
- Compassion
- Empathy
- Love and relationships

- Discover your highest and greatest good
- Foster unconditional love
- Remember that you are dearly loved
